

Harradine designed course at the heart of Tunis Sports City

Sport Cities International, a Bukhatir Group Company, announced its entry into Tunisia with the launch of Tunis Sports City, a 256-hectare project.

The project, which was launched in July, is a pioneering real estate development in the country and will not just be a first-class commercial and residential community, but will also boast of world-class sporting venues.

Located in the Lac de Tunis area in the northern suburbs of the Tunis city, the crowning jewel of the development will no doubt be the 18-hole golf course being designed by renowned golf course architect Peter Harradine.

Mr. Abdul Rahman Bukhatir, Chairman, Bukhatir Group, said: "We at Sport Cities International are delighted to enter this exciting new market and are committed to strengthen the Tunisian economy by offering a viable investment option in luxury property.

"This is definitely a great time to invest in North Africa. The region has remained unaffected by the global crisis and continues to prosper."

The first phase of Tunis Sports City started with the launch of "Cedar", a premium residential golfing community, comprising eight high-rise apartment buildings, 73 standard and grand villas, as well as four blocks of low-rise luxury residences; all with golf course view.

Peter Harradine is among the most respected names in designing with years of expertise in the Middle East. He is the man behind Abu Dhabi Golf Club and Doha Golf Club – the multi-award winning courses which are host venues of the Abu Dhabi Golf Championship and Qatar Masters respectively.
