

GOLF COURSE ARCHITECTURE

THE GLOBAL JOURNAL OF GOLF DESIGN AND DEVELOPMENT

ISSUE 02 APRIL 2015

Harradine resumes work on Living Legends course

Harradine Golf has been re-hired to supervise the construction of a nine-hole golf course in Dubailand, UAE.

The firm drew up the original plans for the course back in 2006, but plans were put on hold due to the global financial crisis.

“I believe that nine-hole golf courses are the future of golf,” said Harradine. “Many golfers can’t spare the time to play 18 holes which take four to five hours. We don’t need longer courses, what we need is more interesting courses and this Living Legends will follow that pattern.”

The Living Legends course will form part of a Tanmiyat Global real estate development and will also be home to a driving range and practice facilities. “We have no doubt that with Peter Harradine and his team on board, Living Legends Golf Course will become one of Dubai’s most popular golfing destinations,” said Mohammed Bin Odah, CEO of Tanmiyat Global. “Harradine has a unique vision and has created a refreshing alternative to Dubai’s 18-hole courses, that will attract not just residents, but golfers throughout the region and tourists alike.”

